

Leading Edge Credit Union is proud to announce that it has declared a dividend and rebate back to its members in the amount of $178,000.

CEO, Cory Munden, explains: “because members are the actual owners of the credit union, surplus earnings are returned to them based on the percentage of business they conduct with their credit union. This is fundamentally different than banks because banks return a percentage of their profits to stockholders who are not necessarily their customers. The banks are publically traded so they work for their major investors and stockholders; credit unions work for our customer/owners so it makes sense that credit unions have ranked first in customer service for eleven years in a row in the IPSOS Best Banking Awards”.

Through the support of its members, Leading Edge Credit Union also distributed $20,912 in donations and sponsorships, provided 248 non-profit groups and 1,210 qualifying members with free banking packages, and provided 301 work-time volunteer hours to various community initiatives throughout its area of operation. Leading Edge Credit Union is committed to improving the social and economic environments of its members and their communities.