Learn More about Being a Director

Who are Credit Union Directors?

The directors of a Credit Union reflect the communities they serve. It is important for a Credit Union to have a strong board consisting of a diverse group of people. Directors come from all walks of life...teachers, trades people, homemakers, farmers, nurses and business people — just to name a few! If you share our belief that financial institutions best serve the people who own them and their communities, then you can make a real contribution; you can help your community prosper.

How do Directors Make a Difference?

As policy makers, directors are instrumental in effecting positive changes which ensures growth and development for their Credit Union and community. Directors often provide a fresh look from a different perspective, which helps their credit union be more responsive to member needs, leading to technological innovation and new services.

How Much Time is Required?

Time commitment can vary, but is typically limited to six or seven board meetings, one planning session, and four to six committee meetings annually. At LECU, we use technology to make it easier for busy professionals to attend board and committee meetings. We would be happy to arrange an opportunity for you to have a conversation with a current board member from your Credit Union to discuss this further.

What Would be Expected of Me?

As a director, you are the Credit Union's link to the membership, to whom the Credit Union is accountable for all policies and decisions. The other major role of a director is to ensure sound management of the Credit Union and to safeguard the members' assets. Directors attend board meetings, committee meetings, special planning sessions, as well as complete any required director training.

What are My Obligations as a Director?

- A director has a duty to see that everything LECU does is within the law.
- Directors make decisions on the policies of the Credit Union. They evaluate risk and accept liability, if they are responsible for violation of provincial guidelines.
- Directors can reduce or eliminate their liability if they direct the affairs of the Credit Union with honesty and reason, to the best of their abilities.

Director Training

New directors want a better understanding of their role and of the business for which they are accountable. Experienced directors want to be in the know about current governance issues and trends. Both groups are in constant search for ways of strengthening their corporate governance practices. The highly respected Credit Union Director Achievement (CUDA) Program offered by CUSOURCE® Credit Union Knowledge Network (CUSource) has been designed to meet these needs.

The CUDA Program offers a blend of online and classroom learning environments that, by their nature, provide valuable networking opportunities. The emphasis of the program is understanding the authority, responsibility and accountability of directors. It also focuses on a broad range of topics from financial reporting, financial statements and performance planning

This program strengthens the knowledge and skills of directors in credit union governance and in the implementation of sound governance practices. Completion of the CUDA Program attests to a director's commitment and signifies a well-rounded understanding of governance.

The CUDA Program

CUDA® PROGRAM The Credit Union Director Achievement (CUDA) Program delivers the most current thinking about credit union corporate governance. Designed for credit union board directors, this program is a roadmap to the knowledge and skills required to effectively govern co-operative financial businesses.

There are three levels in the CUDA Program:

- Foundations of Governance,
- Governance in Action, and
- Governance Application.

Each level includes courses focused on different aspects of governance specifically related to co-operative deposit-taking financial institutions. Courses are offered as online, in-class or eClassroom sessions.
